Contents Volume 25:1 February 2002

Preston, S. D. & de Waal, F. B. M. Empathy: Its ultimate and proximate bases 1

Open Peer Commentary

Ainslie, G. & Monterosso, J. Hyperbolic discounting lets empathy be a motivated process 20
Anderson, C. & Keltner, D. The role of empathy in the formation and maintenance of social bonds 21
Atkinson, A. P. Emotion-specific clues to the neural substrate of empathy 22
Aureli, F. & Schaffner, C. M. Empathy as a special case of emotional mediation of social behavior 23
Bandura, A. Reflexive empathy: On predicting more than has ever been observed 24
Bard, K. A. Developmental processes in empathy 25
Bekoff, M. Empathy: Common sense, science sense, wolves, and well-being 26
Blair, R. J. R. & Perschardt, K. S. Empathy: A unitary circuit or a set of dissociable neuro-cognitive systems? 27
Brownell, C. A., Zerwas, S. & Balaram, G. Peers, cooperative play, and the development of empathy in children 28
Charman, T. Understanding the imitation deficit in autism may lead to a more specific model of autism as an empathy disorder 29
Commons, M. L. & Wolfsont, C. A. A complete theory of empathy must consider stage changes 30
Constantino, J. N. Deconstructing empathy 31
Davis, H. Too early for a neuropsychology of empathy 32
Eisenberg, N. Distinctions among various nodes of empathy-related reactions: A matter of importance in humans 33
Eslinger, P. J., Moll, J. & de Oliveira-Souza, R. Emotional and cognitive processing in empathy and moral behavior 34
Gallese, V., Ferrari, P. F. & Umiltà, M. A. The mirror matching system: A shared manifold for intersubjectivity 35
Gallup, Jr., G. G. & Platek, S. M. Cognitive empathy presupposes self-awareness: Evidence from phylogeny, ontogeny, neuropsychology, and mental illness 36
Gordon, R. M. Empathy, simulation, and PAM 37
Hinde, R. A. Emotion: The relation between breadth of definition and explanatory power 37
Hoffman, M. L. How automatic and representational is empathy, and why 38
Iacoboni, M. & Lenzi, G. L. Mirror neurons, the insula, and empathy 39
Keenan, J. P. & Wheeler, M. A. Elucidation of the brain correlates of cognitive empathy and self-awareness 40
Khalil, E. L. Similarity versus familiarity: When empathy becomes selfish 41
Lewis, M. Empathy requires the development of the self 42
Mealey, L. & Kinner, S. The Perception-Action Model of empathy and psychopathic "cold-heartedness" 42
Panksepp, J., Gordon, N. & Burgdorf, J. Empathy and the action-perception resonances of basic socio-emotional systems of the brain 43
Parr, L. A. Understanding other's emotions: From affective resonance to empathic action 44
Rochat, P. Various kinds of empathy as revealed by the developing child, not the monkey's brain 45
Schulkin, J. Psychobiological basis of empathy 46
Wilson, T. P. & Wilson, M. Perception-action links and the evolution of human speech exchange 47
Zahn-Waxler, C. Caregiving, emotion, and concern for others 48

Author's Response

Preston, S. D. & de Waal, F. B. M. Empathy: Each is in the right – hopefully, not all in the wrong 49

Norman, J. Two visual systems and two theories of perception: An attempt to reconcile the constructivist and ecological approaches 73

Open Peer Commentary

Anderson, G. J. Are the dorsal ventral pathways sufficiently distinct to resolve perceptual theory? 96
Binsted, G. & Carlton, L. G. When is movement controlled by the dorsal stream? 97
Braunstein, M. L. A better understanding of inference can reconcile constructivist and direct theories 99
Burke, D. & Hayward, W. G. Two visual systems but only one theory of perception 100
Chella, A. Conceptual space as a connection between the constructivist and the ecological approaches in a robot vision system 100
Cooper, C. & Michaels, C. F. Perception, learning, and judgment in ecological psychology: Who needs a constructivist ventral system? 101
Cutting, J. E. Invariants and cues 102
de Grave, D. D. J., Smeets, J. B. J. & Brenner, E. Ecological and constructivist approaches and the influence of illusions 103
Ellard, C. G. Evolutionary and intellectual antecedents of primate visual processing streams 104
Elliott, D., Tremblay, L. & Welsh, T. N. A fast ventral stream or early dorsal-ventral interactions? 105
Gentaz, E., Hatwell, Y. & Streri, A. Constructivist and ecological approaches in tactual perception 106
Green, P. R. & Pollick, F. E. Recognising actions 106
Hochberg, J. Direction information on the cutting room floor 107
Ingle, D. A wider view of the spatial mode of vision 108
Kingdom, F. A. A. On invariant-sensitive graspers and cue-sensitive perceivers 110
Mace, W. M. The primacy of ecological realism 111

Mareschal, D. & Kaufman, J. The dual route hypothesis in visual cognition: Why a developmental approach is necessary 111
McCarley, J. S. & DiGirolamo, G. J. One visual system with two interacting visual streams 112
McFarland, D. J. Where does perception end and when does action start? 113
Neisser, U. The dorsal system and the ecological self 114
Phillips, J. G., Meehan, J. W. & Triggs, T. J. Two theories of perception: Internal consistency, separability and interaction between processing modes 114
Postma, A., van der Lubbe, R. & Zuidhoek, S. The ventral stream offers more affordance and the dorsal stream more memory than believed 115
Ross, H. E. Berkeley, Helmholtz, the moon illusion, and two visual systems 116
Shebilske, W. Integrating constructivist and ecological approaches 117
Shull, J. A. & Bingham, G. P. Two visual systems must still perceive events 118
Toates, F. Norman's dual model in a broader context 119 van der Kamp, J. & Savelsbergh, G. J. P. On the development of two visual systems 120

Author's Response

Norman, J. Adequacy and utility of the dual-process approach to perception: Time (and research) will tell 121

Continuing Commentary

On Greenfield, Patricia M. (1991) Language, tools and brain: The ontogeny and phylogeny of hierarchically organized sequential behavior. BBS 14:531–595. 145

Reilly, R. G. The relationship between object manipulation and language development in Broca's area: A connectionist simulation of Greenfield's hypothesis 145

Author's Response

Greenfield, P. M. 153

Contents Volume 25:2 April 2002

Pylyshyn, Z. W. Mental imagery: In search of a theory 157

Open Peer Commentary

Amiri, H. & Marsolek, C. J. Depicting second-order isomorphism and "depictive" representations 182
Arterberry, M. E., Craver-Lemley, C. & Reeves, A. Visual imagery is not always like visual perception 183
Bartolomeo, P. & Chokron, S. Can we change our vantage point to explore imaginal neglect? 184
Burgess, N. Spatial models of imagery for remembered scenes are more likely to advance (neuro)science than symbolic ones 185
Chatterjee, A. Pictures, propositions, and primitives in the head 186
Dalla Barba, G., Rosenthal, V. & Visetti, Y.-M. The nature of mental imagery: How null is the "null hypothesis"? 187
De Haan, E. & Aleman, A. Mental imagery: In search of my theory 188
Dennett, D. C. Does your brain use the images in it, and if so, how? 189
Gold, I. Interpreting the neuroscience of imagery 190
Goldenberg, G. Loss of visual imagery: Neuropsychological evidence in search for a theory 191
Gosselin, F. & Schyns, P. G. You are about to see pictorial representations! 191
Gottesmann, C. Mental imagery during sleep 193
Gottschling, V. Functional versus real space: Is pictorialism hopeless? 193
Grossberg, S. Neural substrates of visual percepts, imagery, and hallucinations 194
Ingle, D. Problems with a "cortical screen" for visual imagery 195
Intons-Peterson, M. J. How do we define "sameness" of the processing of mental images and general reasoning processes? 196
Jüttner, M. & Rentschler, I. Imagery in multi-modal object learning 197
Kosslyn, S. M., Thompson, W. L. & Ganis, G. Mental imagery doesn't work like that 198
Meyer, G. E. Single cells in the visual system and images past 200
Millar, S. Imagery and blindness 201
Niall, K. K. Visual imagery and the geometric enthymeme: The example of Euclid I.1 202
Nijhawan, R. & Khurana, B. Motion, space, and mental imagery 203
Olivetti Belardinelli, M. & Di Matteo, R. Is mental imagery prominently visual? 204
Pani, J. R. Mental imagery is simultaneously symbolic and analog 205
Petrusic, W. M. & Baranski, J. V. Mental imagery in memory psychophysics 206
Polimeni, J. & Schwartz, E. Neural representation of sensory data 207
Raab, M. & Boschker, M. Time matters! Implications from mentally imaged motor actions 208
Slezak, P. P. The imagery debate: Déjà-vu all over again? 209
Sokolov, E. N. Neuronal basis of imagery 210
Thomas, N. J. T. The false dichotomy of imagery 211
Toth, J. A. When is enough enough? The integration of competing scientific agendas 212
Van der Velde, F. & de Kamps, M. Involvement of a visual blackboard architecture in imagery 213
Wright, E. A visual registration can be coloured without being a picture 214
Zaidi, Q. & Griffiths, A. F. Generic assumptions shared by visual perception and imagery 215

Author's Response

Pylyshyn, Z. W. Stalking the elusive mental image screen 216

Rachlin, H. Altruism and selfishness 239

Open Peer Commentary

Ainslie, G. & Haslam, N. Altruism is a primary impulse, not a discipline 251
Alexander, J. M. Behaviorism and altruistic acts 252
Baron, J. Rationality and illusion 252
Broude, G. J. Can't we all just be altruistic? 253
Buck, R. "Choice" and "emotion" in altruism: Reflections on the morality of justice versus the morality of caring 254
Carlo, G. & Bevins, R. A. The need for proximal mechanisms to understand individual differences in altruism 255
Danielson, P. Learning to cooperate: Reciprocity and self-control 256
Fantino, E. J. & Stolarz-Fantino, S. J. The role of negative reinforcement; or: Is there an altruist in the house? 257
Gintis, H. Altruism and emotions 258
Grace, R. C., McLean, A. & Bragason, O. Can altruism be understood in terms of socially-discounted extrinsic reinforcement? 259
Gray, J. R. & Braver, T. S. Cognitive control in altruism and self-control: A social cognitive neuroscience perspective 260
Grim, P. The basic questions: What is reinforced? What is selected? 261
Hartung, J. So be good for goodness' sake 261
Hinde, R. A. Reinforcement stretched beyond its limit 262
Kaplan, S. & De Young, R. Toward a better understanding of prosocial behavior: The role of evolution and directed attention 263
Khalil, E. L. Is the prisoner's dilemma metaphor suitable for altruism? Distinguishing self-control and commitment from altruism 264
Krebs, D. L. Adaptive altruistic strategies 265
Krueger, J. I. & Acevedo, M. Why cooperate? Social projection as a cognitive mechanism that helps us do good 266
Lacey, H. Teleological behaviorism and altruism 266
Levine, D. K. An economist's perspective on altruism and selfishness 267

Lewis, M. Altruism is never self-sacrifice 268
Margolis, H. Altruism and Darwinian rationality 269
Perugini, M. What is an altruistic action? 270
Read, D. Altruism: Brand management or uncontrollable urge? 271
Reed, P. Defying evolutionary psychology 272
Schuster, R. Altruism is a social behavior 272
Sedikides, C. & Gregg, A. P. Internal mechanisms that implicate the self enlighten the egoism-altruism debate 274
Sobel, J. Putting altruism in context 275
Stukas, A. A., Jr., Platow, M. J. & Foddy, M. The role of social and cognitive factors in the production of altruism 276
Van der Steen, W. J. Dissolving the elusiveness of altruism 277
Wagstaff, G. F. Altruism, self-control, and justice: What Aristotle really said 278
Wedekind, C. Valuable reputation gained by altruistic behavioral patterns 279
Weirich, P. Decisions to follow a rule 280
Wilson, D. S. & Miller, R. R. Altruism, evolutionary psychology, and learning 281
Zentall, T. R. A potentially testable mechanism to account for altruistic behavior 282
Zizzo, D. J. From reinforcement of acts to reinforcement of social preferences 282
Zuidema, W. The importance of social learning in the evolution of cooperation and communication 283

Author's Response

Rachlin, H. Altruism is a form of self-control 284

Contents Volume 25:3 June 2002

Perruchet, P. & Vinter, A. The self-organizing consciousness 297

Open Peer Commentary

Barrouillet, P. & Markovits, H. Is the self-organizing self consciousness framework compatible with human deductive reasoning? 330
Bartolomeo, P. & Dalla Barba, G. Varieties of consciousness 331
Bornstein, R. F. Consciousness organizes more than itself: Findings from subliminal mere exposure research 332
Carlson, R. A. Mentalism, information, and consciousness 333
Dandurand, F. & Shultz, T. R. Modeling consciousness 334
Destrebecqz, A. & Cleeremans, A. The self-organizing conundrum 334
Dienes, Z. & Perner, J. What sort of representation is conscious? 336
Dulany, D. E. Mentalistic metatheory and strategies 337
Ellis, R. D. The limited roles of unconscious computation and representation in self-organizational theories of mind 338
French, R. M. Natura non facit saltum: The need for the full continuum of mental representations 339
Holender, D. & Duscherer, K. Unconscious semantic access: A case against a hyperpowerful unconscious 340
Houdé, O. Consciousness and unconsciousness of logical reasoning errors in the human brain 341
Jiménez, L. Surfing on consciousness, or, a deliberately shallow outline of cognition 342
Keisler, A. S. & Willingham, D. T. Unconscious abstraction in motor learning 342
Kurthen, M. The conscious and the unconscious: A package deal 343
Lambert, A. J. The reported demise of the cognitive unconscious is premature 344
Litman, L. & Reber, A. S. Rules, abstractions, and evolution 345
Manzotti, R. & Sandini, G. What does "isomorphism between conscious representations and the structure of the world" mean? 346
Murray, D. J. The SOC framework and short-term memory 347
O'Brien, G. & Opie, J. The computational baby, the classical bathwater, and the middle way 348
Parisse, C. & Cohen, H. Oral and visual language are not processed in like fashion: Constraints on the products of the SOC 349
Phillips, S. Neo-associativism: Limited learning transfer without binding symbol representations 350
Redington, M. Associative learning: A generalisation too far 351
Rivera-Gaxiola, M. & Silva-Pereyra, J. F. Is syntax a representation in itself? 352
Seger, C. A. Does the SOC theory avoid unconscious rule use? 353
Shanon, B. Remember the old masters! 353
Siéroff, E. Hemineglect, extinction, and the importance of conscious processing 354
Sun, R. The emergence of consciousness: BUC versus SOC 355
Tzelgov, J. Trading automatic/nonautomatic for unconscious/conscious 356
Velmans, M. Could phenomenal consciousness function as a cognitive unconscious? 357
Wang, W. S-Y. & Ke, J. Language heterogeneity and self-organizing consciousness 358
Wolters, G. & Phaf, R. H. Contrasts and dissociations suggest qualitative differences between conscious and unconscious processes 359
Yamauchi, T. The self-organizing consciousness entails additional intervening subsystems 360

Authors' Response

Perruchet, P. & Vinter, A. The self-organizing consciousness as an alternative model of the mind 360

Wynn, T. Archaeology and cognitive evolution 389

Open Peer Commentary

Bridgeman, B. Artifacts and cognition: Evolution or cultural progress? 403
Calvin, W. H. Rediscovery and the cognitive aspects of toolmaking: Lessons from the handaxe 403
Commons, M. L. & Miller, P. M. A complete theory of human evolution of intelligence must consider stage changes 404
Coventry, K. R. & Clibbens, J. Does complex behaviour imply complex cognitive abilities? 406
Derębowski, J. B. Is symmetry of stone tools merely an epiphenomenon of similarity? 406
Epstein, H. T. Evolution of the reasoning human brain 408
Gurd, J. M., Fink, G. R. & Marshall, J. C. Tacit symmetry detection and explicit symmetry processing 409
Humphrey, D. Symmetry in knapped stones is real, not romanced 409
Jeffares, B. The explanatory limits of cognitive archaeology 410
Jordan, J. S. Deriving intentionality from artifacts 412
Masters, R. & Maxwell, J. Was early man caught knapping during the cognitive (r)evolution? 413
Nowell, A. Coincidental factors of handaxe morphology 413
Parker, S. T. Locating early Homo and Homo erectus tool production along the extractive foraging/cognitive continuum 414
Reber, R. Reasons for the preference for symmetry 415
Schoenemann, P. T. Putting meat on the bones: The necessity of empirical tests of hypotheses about cognitive evolution 416
Silverman, I. Symmetry and human spatial cognition: An alternative perspective 418
Simão, J. Tools evolve: The artificial selection and evolution of Paleolithic stone tools 419
Stone, V. E. Footloose and fossil-free no more: Evolutionary psychology needs archaeology 420
Stout, D. Thinking and doing in cognitive archaeology: Giving skill its due 421
Van der Helm, P. A. Natural selection of visual symmetries 422

Wagman, J. B. Symmetry for the sake of symmetry or symmetry for the sake of behavior? 423
Weaver, A. H. The fossil evidence for spatial cognition 424
Welshon, R. Intentions, goals, and the archaeological record 425

Author's Response

Wynn, T. The devil in the details 426

Hull, D. L., Langman, R. E. & Glenn, S. S. A general account of selection: Biology, immunology, and behavior 511

Open Peer Commentary

Baum, W. M. Two stumbling blocks to a general account of selection: Replication and information 528
Bevins, R. A. Should we essentially ignore the role of stimuli in a general account of operant selection? 528
Blute, M. A single-process learning theory 529
Burgos, J. E. A neural-network interpretation of selection in learning and behavior 531
Catania, A. C. Selection as a cause versus the causes of selection 533
Chiesa, M. Does terminology from biology work in the realm of operant behavior? 533
Cziko, G. A. Heeding Darwin but ignoring Bernard: External behaviors are not selected, internal goals are 534
Eacker, J. N. Selection and unification of science 535
Eckerman, D. A. & Kemp, S. M. Selection: Unexplored and underexplored realms 536
Glassman, M. Replication or reproduction?: Symbiogenesis as an alternative theory 537
Godfrey-Smith, P. The role of information and replication in selection processes 538
Grantham, T. Do operant behaviors replicate? 538
Heschl, A. Natural selection and metaphors of "selection" 539
Hesse, B. E. & Novak, G. On the origins of complexity 540
Hineline, P. N. Sharing terms and concepts under the selectionist umbrella: Difficult but worthwhile 541
Leslie, J. C. Selection in operant learning may fit a general model 542
Madden, G. J. Concerns of old, revisited 543
Malott, R. W. Operant learning and selectionism: Risks and benefits of seeking interdisciplinary parallels 544
Matthen, M. How (and why) Darwinian selection restricts environmental feedback 545
McSweeney, F. K. & Aoyama, K. Evolution and operant behavior, metaphor or theory? 545
Moore, J. Operant behavior and the thesis of "selection by consequences" 546
Nanay, B. A more pluralist typology of selection processes 547
Okasha, S. "Which processes are selection processes?" 548
Pennypacker, H. S. Are theories of selection necessary? 549
Pepper, J. W. & Knudsen, T. Selection without multiple replicators? 550
Pierce, W. D. Activity anorexia: Biological, behavioral, and neural levels of selection 551
Reeke, G. N. Replication in selective systems: Multiplicity of carriers, variation of information, iteration of encounters 552
Rotenberg, V. S. Variations and active versus reactive behavior as factors of the selection processes 553
Simonton, D. K. Creativity as cognitive selection: The blind-variation and selective-retention model 554
Skipper, Jr., R. A. The casual crux of selection 556
Spiga, R. Selection: Information and replication of the operant 556
Thompson, N. S. Avoiding vicious circularity requires more that a modicum of care 557
Tonneau, F. & Sokolowski, M. B. C. Is operant selectionism coherent? 558
Vaidya, M. Are units of retention necessary? 559

Author's Response

Hull, D. L., Langman, R. E. & Glenn, S. S. At last: Serious consideration 559

Contents Volume 25:4 August 2002

Williams, A. C. de C. Facial expression of pain: An evolutionary account 439

Open Peer Commentary

Chapman, C. R. & Nakamura, Y. What role does intersubjectivity play in the facial expression of pain? 455
Craig, K. D. & Badali, M. A. Pain in the social animal 456
Crombez, G. & Eccleston, C. To express or suppress may be function of others' distress 457
Davies, T. N. & Hoffman, D. D. Psychophysical studies of expressions of pain 458
Evans, D. Pain, evolution, and the placebo response 459
Frijda, N. H. What is pain facial expression for? 460
Green, M. S. Intention and authenticity in the facial expression of pain 460
Harris, C. R. & Alvardo, N. Pain facial expression: Individual variability undermines the specific adaptationist account 461
Hermann, C. & Flor, H. Facial expression of pain – more than a fuzzy expression of distress? 462
Izard, C. E. Continuity and change in infants' facial expressions following an unanticipated aversive stimulus 463
Keogh, E. & A. Holdcroft Sex differences in pain: Evolutionary links to facial pain expression 465
McGrath, P. J. Facial expression of pain: "Just so stories," spandrels and patient blaming 466
Novak, G. & Peláez, M. A behavior-analytic developmental model is better 466
Panksepp, J. & Pasqualini, M. S. "Mindscoping" pain and suffering 468
Pantic, M. & Rothkrantz, L. J. M. Machine understanding of facial expression of pain 469
Prkachin, K. M. Pain behavior and the pretence of knowledge 470
Salzen, E. A. The feeling of pain and the emotion of distress 471
Schmidt, K. L. The evolutionarily novel context of clinical caregiving and facial displays of pain 471
Sullivan, M. D. The meaning of facial expressions of pain lies in their use, not in their reference 472
Von Baeyer, C. L. Children's facial expressions of pain in the context of complex social interactions 473
Voracek, M. & Shackelford, T. K. An evolutionary theory of pain must consider sex differences 474

Author's Response

Williams, A. C. de C. Facial expression of pain, empathy, evolution, and social learning 475

Andrews, P. W., Gangestad, S. W., and Matthews, D. Adaptationism – how to carry out an exaptationist program 489

Open Peer Commentary

Atran, S. Modest adaptationism: Muddling through cognition and language 504
Barrett, L & Henzi, S. P. Are all bases covered? 506
Blackburn, D. G. Use of phylogenetic analysis to distinguish adaptation from exaptation 507
Brase, G. L. There is no evidentiary silver bullet for the frequency adaptation hypothesis 508
Brown, W. M. Development: The missing link between exaptationist and adaptationist accounts of organismal design 509
Browne, D. Troubles with exaptationism 510
Crawford, C. Musings on the concept of exaptation and "creationism" 511
Dannemiller, J. L. Lack of evidentiary criteria for exaptations? 512
Davies, P. S. Does past selective efficacy matter to psychology? 513
Deleporte, P. Phylogenetics and the aptationist program 514
Dickins, T. E. & Dickins, D. W. Is empirical imagination a constraint on adaptationist theory construction? 515
Dupré, J. Ontology is the problem 516
Figueredo, A. J. & Berry, S. C. "Just not so stories": Exaptations, spandrels, and constraints 517
Fuentes, A. Towards an evolutionary pluralism? The need to establish evidentiary standards and avoid reification of assumptions 518
Hagen, E. H. Special design's centuries of success 519
Haig, B. & Durrant, R. Adaptationism and inference to the best explanation 520
Jones, O. D. Allocating presumptions 521
Klein, D. F. Identifying adaptation by dysfunction 521
LaMunyon, C. W. & Shackelford, T. K. Evolutionary analyses should include pluralistic and falsifiable hypotheses 522
Palmer, C. T. Yes, but it was never just about the science 523
Pellis, S. M. When is a trait an adaptation? 524
Roney, J. R. & Maestripieri, D. The importance of comparative and phylogenetic analyses in the study of adaptation 525
Rutherford, M. D. Its adaptations all the way down 526
Schaller, M. The evidentiary standard of special design is a little bit like heaven 526
Schank, J. C. Where are all the genes? 527
Simpson, J. A. From exploration to justification: The importance of "special design" evidence 528
Smith, E. A. The fuzzy zone between exaptation and phenotypic adaptation 529
Swanson, J., Moyzis, R., Fossella, J., Fan, J., & Posner, M. I. Adaptationism and molecular biology: An example based on ADHD 530
Thompson, N. S. Adaptation for, exaptation as 531
Wakefield, J. C. Why specific design is not the mark of the adaptational 532
Zuk, M. A straw man on a dead horse: Studying adaptation then and now 533

Author's Response

Andrews, P. W., Gangestad, S. W., and Matthews, D. Adaptationism, exaptationism, and evolutionary behavioral science 534

Contents Volume 25:5 October 2002

Northoff, G. What catatonia can tell us about "top-down modulation": A neuropsychiatric hypothesis 555

Open Peer Commentary

Aleman, A. & Kahn, R. S. Top-down modulation, emotion, and hallucination 578
Badgaiyan, R. D. Nonconscious processing, anterior cingulate, and catatonia 578
Bearden, C. E. & Monterosso, J. R. Catatonia isn't ready for a unified theory 579
Bogerts, B. Does catatonia have a specific brain biology? 580
Carroll, B. T. What medical catatonias tell us about top-down modulation 581
De Oliveira-Souza, R., Moll, J., Ignácio, F. A. & Eslinger, P. J. Catatonia: A window into the cerebral underpinnings of will 582
Fricchione, G. Catatonia: a disorder of motivation and movement 584
Hardcastle, V. G. Top-down versus bottom-up is not the same thing as psychological versus biological 585
Horvitz, J. C. Dopamine, Parkinson's disease, and volition 586
Kamal, A. K. & Schiff, N. D. Does the form of akinetic mutism linked to mesodiencephalic injuries bridge the double dissociation of Parkinson's disease and catatonia? 586
Marshall, J. C., Gurd, J. M. & Fink, G. R. Catatonia, motor neglect, and hysterical paralysis: Some similarities and differences 587
Miu, A. C. & Olteanu, A. I. Catatonia in Alzheimer's disease: The role of the amygdalo-hippocampal circuits 588
Platek, S. M. & Gallup, G. G. A self frozen in time and space: Catatonia as a kinesthetic analog to mirrored self-misidentification 589
Savodnik, I. The disease status of catatonia 590
Shaw, C. A. Do neurodegenerative cascades in Parkinson's disease really reflect bottom-up processing? 591

Author's Response

Northoff, G. Neurophysiology, neuropsychiatry and neurophilosophy of catatonia 592

Shanker, S. G. & King, B. J. The emergence of a new paradigm in ape language research 605

Open Peer Commentary

Armstrong, D. F. Ethnography should replace experimentation 620
Bonvillian, J. D. & Patterson, F. G. P. A new paradigm? 621
Cangelosi, A. Language evolution in apes and autonomous agents 622
Fogel, A., de Koeyer, I., Secrist, C. & Nagy, R. Dynamic systems theory places the scientist in the system 623
Gardner, R. A. The proper study of chimpkind 624
Grammer, K. Is there empirical evidence for the dynamic nature of communication systems?: The role of synchronization and inferential communication 625
Hahn, U. Information, information transfer, and information processing 626
Ingold, T. Communication and communion 627
Johnson, C. M. The Vygotskian advantage in cognitive modeling: Participation precedes and thus prefigures understanding 628
Kako, E. What ape language research means for representations 629
Kuczaj, S. A., Ramos, J. A. & Paulos, R. L. Dancing on thin ice 629
Kuhlmeier, V. & Bloom, P. You can dance if you want to 630
Leavens, D. A. On the public nature of communication 631
Locke, J. L. Dancing with humans: Interaction as unintended consequence 632
Miklósi, A. Can dancing replace scientific approach: Lost (again) in chimpocentrism 633
Myin, E. & Smets, S. Could dancing be coupled oscillation? – the interactive approach to linguistic communication and dynamic systems theory 634
Pear, J. J. Does the new paradigm in ape-language research ape behaviorism? 635
Pepperberg, I. M. Research scientist 636
Rendall, D. & Vasey, P. Metaphor muddles in communication theory 637
Russon, A. E. & Begun, D. R. Great ape communication: Cognitive and evolutionary approaches 638
Sessle, B. J. & Yao, D. Contribution of plasticity of sensorimotor cerebral cortex to development of communication skills 638
Spurrett, D. Information processing and dynamical systems approaches are complementary 639
Symons, J. Information, representation, and the dynamic systems approach to language 640
Thompson, N. S. & Valsiner, J. Doesn't a dance require dancers? 641
Vauclair, J. Does the use of the dynamic system approach really help fill in the gap between human and nonhuman primate language? 642
Visetti, Y.-M. & Rosenthal, V. Human expression and experience: What does it mean to have language? 643
Waters, G. & Wilcox, S. Making meaning 644
Westbury, C. Blind men, elephants, and dancing information processors 645
Zentall, T. R. A multichannel information-processing system is simpler and more easily tested 646

Authors' Response

Shanker, S. G. & King, B. J. The emergence of a new paradigm in ape language research: Beyond interactionism 646

Contents Volume 25:6 December 2002

Carruthers, P. The cognitive functions of language 657

Open Peer Commentary

Atran, S. A metamodule for conceptual integration: Language or theory of mind? 674
Baumeister, R. F. & Vohs, K. D. The collective invention of language to access the universe of possible ideas 675
Bermudez, J. L. Domain-generality and the relative pronoun 676
Bickerton, D. Language in the modular mind? It's a no-brainer! 677
Bryant, G. A. & Gibbs, R. W. You don't say: Figurative language and thought 678
Bryson, J. J. Language isn't quite that special 679
Chater, N. Is LF really a linguistic level? 680
Clark, A. Anchors not inner codes, coordination not translation (and hold the modules please) 681
Dale, R. & Spivey, M. A linguistic module for integrating the senses, or a house of cards? 681 de Villiers, J. G. & de Villiers, P. A. Why not LF for false belief reasoning? 682
Dominey, P. F. Cross-domain thinking: Common representation format or generalized mapping process? 683
Evans, J. S. B. T. & Over, D. E. The role of language in the dual process theory of thinking 684
Frankish, K. Language, consciousness, and cross-modular thought 685
Frawley, W. Inner speech and the meeting of the minds 686
Gauker, C. No conceptual thought without language 687
Hampton, J. A. Language's role in enabling abstract, logical thought 688
Henser, S. Relativistic implications of a natural-language-based format for thought 688
Hermer-Vazquez, L. Viewing cognitive mechanisms in the context of biology 689
Hurford, J. R. & Dessalles, J.-L. The problematic transition from specific competences to general competence 690
MacWhinney, B. How perspective shift integrates thought 691
Molina, C. Could you think Carruthers's ideas without having to speak them? Talk with yourself if you want to have any thought on that 692
Nelson, K. Developing dual-representation processes 693
O'Brien, G. & Opie, J. Internalizing communication 694
Pléh, C. Speech as an opportunistic vehicle of thinking 695
Robbins, P. What domain integration could not be 696
Samuels, R. The spatial reorientation data do not support the thesis that language is the medium of cross-modular thought 697
Schrauf, R. W. Bilingual inner speech as the medium of cross-modular retrieval in autobiographical memory 698
Slezak, P. P. Talking to ourselves: The intelligibility of inner speech 699
Slobin, D. I. What language is "mentalese"? 700
Vallortigara, G. & Sovrano, V. A. Conjoining information from different modules: A comparative perspective 701
Varley, R. & Siegal, M. Language, cognition, and the nature of modularity: Evidence from aphasia 702
Wynn, T. & Coolidge, F. The role of working memory in skilled and conceptual thought 703
Xu, F. Language and conceptual development: Words as essence placeholders 704

Author's Response

Carruthers, P. Modularity, language, and the flexibility of thought 705

Thomas, M. & Karmiloff-Smith, A. Are developmental disorders like cases of adult brain damage? Implications from connectionist modelling 727

Open Peer Commentary

Briscoe, J. The beauty of models for developmental disorders 750
Christiansen, M. H., Conway, C. M. & Ellefson, M. R. Raising the bar for connectionist modeling of cognitive developmental disorders 752
Condray, R. & Steinhauer, S. R. The residual normality assumption and models of cognition in schizophrenia 753
Cooper, R. P. Two closely related simulations provide weak limits on Residual Normality 754
Ferrari, M. Development is also experienced by a personal self who is shaped by culture 755
Friedmann, N. & Gvion, A. Modularity in developmental disorders: Evidence from Specific Language Impairment and peripheral dyslexias 756
Gerrans, P. Nativism, neuroconstructivism, and developmental disorder 757
Jackson, N. E. & Coltheart, M. Distinguishing proximal from distal causes is useful and compatible with accounts of compensatory processing in developmental disorders of cognition 758
Juola, P. Encapsulating architecture and encapsulating processes 759
Levine, S. C., Regier, T. & Solomon, T. L. Did Residual Normality ever have a chance? 759
Levy, Y. Structural abnormality may not equal functional oddity 760
Li, S.-C. & Lindenberger, U. Coconstructed functionality instead of functional normality 761
Marcus, G. F. What can developmental disorders tell us about modularity? 762
McClelland, J. L. & Lupyan, G. Double dissociations never license simple inferences about underlying brain organization, especially in developmental cases 763
Müller, R.-A. Weak evidence for a strong case against modularity in developmental disorders 764

Munakata, Y., Edgin, J. O. & Stedron, J. M. The best is yet to come: The promise of models of developmental disorders 765
Pléh, C., Lukács, Á. & Racsmány, M. Residual Normality and the issue of language profiles in Williams syndrome 766
Ramus, F. Evidence for a domain-specific deficit in developmental dyslexia 767
Tallal, P. Are developmental disabilities the same in children and adults? 768
Temple, C. & Clahsen, H. How connectionist simulations fail to account for developmental disorders in children 769
Temple, E. The developmental cognitive neuroscience approach to the study of developmental disorders 771
Westermann, G. & Mareschal, D. Models of atypical development must also be models of normal development 771

Author's Response
Thomas, M. & Karmiloff-Smith, A. Residual Normality: Friend or foe? 772